

Chabahar port, economic gateway to South-North corridor

In an exclusive interview with Iran Press, Abdolrahim Kordi reiterated the strategic importance of Chabahar port for the region, saying that "Investments in transportation infrastructure in Chabahar have attracted the attention of regional countries to this port, especially the attention of Central Asian countries and Russia

In addition to Russia and Central Asia, India is also investing substantially in Chabahar in accordance with the Chabahar agreement," the managing director of Chabahar Free Trade and Industrial Zone added

Abdolrahim Kordi went on to say that the strategic location of Chabahar and reduction of transportation costs in the port have made the port attractive to countries wishing to export to central Asia or Russia, and thus they are more likely to seek a presence in Chabahar despite unilateral [US] sanctions

The Chabahar port has a strategic location outside the Persian Gulf and the Strait of Hormuz; with easy access to the Indian ocean, playing an important role in regional export, import, trade, and transit
